I. Sugarbooger: This is one of the bigger splat mats, measuring 42" by 42" — perfect if your little one likes to use mealtime as a chance to exercise her pitching arm. It comes with a matching zipper bag, which I love for travel and storage. It fits easily into a kitchen drawer or my suitcase. The mess accompanying meals can be stressful in hotels or vacation rentals; this eliminates any concern. The kids eat, the floor stays clean and your security deposit remains intact. This mat is sturdy, made of a laminated cotton canvas and can be wiped clean. If you find a pattern you love you'll be happy to know you can also buy a slew of matching products, including sippy cups, plates, bowls, silverware and even teethingers. I adore this mat. When my son gets a bit older I plan to use it for craft projects as well as a table cloth for the toddler table we have our eye on for the next stage of eating. (Ore'Originals, $49.95)
